MINISTRY OF TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS INDIA METEOROLOGICAL DEPARTMENT

New Delhi, the 14th January 1958

Memorandum on the probable amount of rain and snow in Northwest India in January, February and March 1958.

It is possible in some years to form a rough estimate of the probable amount of Winter Precipitation in Northwest India during January to March from certain antecedent atmospheric conditions in different parts of the globe. The factors which act as guides in this matter are, in the order of decreasing reliability, the following:—

- (1) Mean pressure in December in South America,
- (2) The westerly component of the upper winds over northern India at a height of 5 to 8 Kms. (September second half and October first half),
- (3) December rain at Port Blair,
- (4) December rain at Quetta.

2. Division 'Northwest India'

In this memorandum 'Northwest India' is taken to consist of the Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I) (including Himachal Pradesh and Delhi), Rajasthan, Gujarat, Saurashtra and Cutch. In as much, however, as the rainfall in March in the Uttar Pradesh is said to be prejudicial rather than favourable to the crops, this rainfall is not taken into consideration.

3. Data

The relevant data for the present season are:—

- (1) South American pressure—Pressure was 0.4 mm. (0.5 mb.) below normal in December,
- (2) The high level winds over northern India—the westerly component of the upper winds was stronger than usual over New Delhi and Gwalior,
- (3) December rainfall at Port Blair was in large defect,
- (4) Quetta rain was in large defect in December.

4. Conclusion

Out of the four factors which are used in forecasting the winter precipitation in Northwest India this year, high level winds over Northern India and Port Blair rain are very favourable, South American Pressure is unfavourable and Quetta Rain very unfavourable. The factors are conflicting and all that can be said is that the combined rainfall and snowfall in Northwest India during the period January to March 1958 is likely to be normal or in slight excess.
